New Programs To Support FinStream's Mission To Increase Financial Literacy

April 4, 2025 – New York, NY – FinStream TV Celebrates Financial Literacy Month by announcing new programming in April in support of Financial Literacy Month.

FinStream.TV, a streaming OTT channel focused on personal finance, has developed over 800 short form videos to increase financial literacy.

FinStream features the world's top experts on "everything money," from designing your personal financial plan, to saving for a house, to funding college tuitions, to planning for retirement and everything in between. Whether you're Gen Z, a Millennial, a Boomer or part of the Silent generation, FinStream offers invaluable and objective actionable guidance that you can start using right away. Programs currently available on FinStream feature financial experts such as Robert Powell (aka Mr. Retirement), Jae Oh (author of Maximize Your Medicare), Financial Planner Lee Baker, Jean Chatzky, Pam Krueger, Michelle Singletary, Bob Pisani and many more.

Throughout the month of April, FinStream will launch additional on demand streaming videos offering viewers financial literacy basics, actionable savings tips and additional resources to help people improve financial literacy across the generations.

These three pillars distinguish FinStream's financial literacy mission.

- Original programming
- Focus on women and minorities
- Curated content

"Although we've been focused on the US, FinStream TV has viewers in over 150 countries" said co-founder Bob Powell, distinguished financial journalist and contributor to MarketWatch, TheStreet, USA Today and other media outlets. Our Youtube channel alone has over 1 million subscribers. We plan to add even more original content aimed at helping educate people of all ages about personal finance.” Check out some of the new programs as FinStream TV Celebrates Financial Literacy Month.
