FinStream's Mission is to improve the lives of all people, especially women and minorities, by increasing financial literacy. Founded by veterans from the financial services, media and communications industries, finStream TV is uniquely positioned as your personal financial resource, targeted to different generations and your specific needs.

Watch Finstream on Roku to meet top experts on "everything money"; from designing your personal financial plan, to paying down debt, to saving for a house, to funding college tuitions, to planning for retirement and everything in between. Whether you're Gen Z, a Millennial, a Boomer or part of the Silent generation, finStream TV offers invaluable and objective actionable guidance that you can start using right now. And in addition to our unique positioning, finStream TV is a channel that also focuses on women and minorities and their specific issues related to saving and investing because women and minorities are underserved audiences when it comes to money.

FinStream is a streaming TV channel devoted to simplifying complicated money and career issues—it's your trusted home where you can come for personal finance advice.
